DECISIONONE JOINS GOOGLE ENTERPRISE PROFESSIONAL PROGRAM, WITH A FOCUS ON INSTALLATIONS OF THE GOOGLE SEARCH APPLIANCE

Devon, PA, June 14, 2006 - Google, the worldwide leader in search engine technology, has selected DecisionOne, North America's largest independent technology support services firm, to join the Google Enterprise Professional Program, which extends the power of Google search and helps customers derive more value from their Google enterprise search deployments. As a Google Enterprise Professional partner, DecisionOne will provide installation services for Google's small, medium, and large business customers.

"DecisionOne now provides companies purchasing Google's enterprise search technology and solutions with a local, reliable, cost-effective way to install their appliances," said Geoffrey Drayton, Vice President, Business Development, DecisionOne. "We have more than 45 years experience in providing commercial enterprises throughout the U.S. and Canada with affordable, high quality technology support services. Partnering with Google to bring their world-class search experience to the enterprise is a great complement to DecisionOne's core capability."

The Google Enterprise Professional program includes developers, consultants and independent software vendors that provide value-added services for Google enterprise products. Google's enterprise search products offer a company's employees the same quality search experience across all their corporate information as people get with Google.com.

"Google is excited to have DecisionOne as a partner in the Google Enterprise Professional program to bring the power of Google search to businesses that would like additional installation and support services for our appliances," said Kevin Smith, program manager for Google Enterprise Professional.
